

Welcome to WebsterXL

Installation

To install the program, either copy the WebsterXL files from your green disc into your Internet directory on your hard disc, or make a WebsterXL directory on your hard disc and copy them into that. There is no technical installation required to get going (especially if you already have Internet connection software) as WebsterXL is preset for most users. You may alter the configuration later if you wish - see the online manual for more information.

Running WebsterXL

Simply double click on the WebsterXL icon on your hard disc once you've installed it. The program will load and install itself on the iconbar, and will display the default home page. If you wish to start browsing straight away, make sure you are connected to the Internet, then:

- Type in the internet address you wish to visit in the field marked URL in the toolbar and press Return.
- Select the links page in the online help and visit one of the predefined sites!

Online Documentation

In addition to providing a number of links, the first page also acts as a contents page for the online documentation. Simply click on the section you wish to view, and Webster will show it to you. If you click on the Print button on the toolbar at the top of the window, you can print out the documentation sections.

Setting the Window Size/Position

The first thing that most users will want to do is to resize the default window to better suit their normal screen mode/size. To do this, move and resize the main window to where you want it on the screen, and press the menu mouse button over the main page view. Go off the File -> Save menu, and select "Window Position".

For more information on browsing the Web, see the Getting Started section in the online documentation.
